Vanadium is growing in importance as an alloying metal used to strengthen steel as well as the emerging uses with lithium vanadium batteries and storage cells for renewable energy. With virtually all world production of vanadium coming from China, South Africa and Russia, the Gibellini project, being located in Nevada, gives the Company the opportunity to become North America’s first and only primary producer of Vanadium. Gibellini’s favorable geologic setting and amenability to low cost heap leach recoveries offer unique low cost production capabilities. A Scoping Study has been completed by AMEC E&C Services and is available on SEDAR and the Company’s website www.rkyresources.com.
